Brightcom, Powered by LYCOS

- Partnership

Recent Census bureau data in the U.S. shows that the US-Hispanic population will make up 21% of the country's population by 2030, and advertisers are racing to acquire the best set of tools to reach these powerful consumers.

As a part of that effort, Medula is now teaming up with Brightcom to capitalize on our multi-channel programmatic products, in order to optimize monetization of its digital inventory for online Hispanics on all devices and levels, including display, video, mobile and social media advertising. Medula's properties include more than 300 top tier sites including Clarín, La República and La Tercera among others, as well as substantial U.S. Hispanic traffic.

- APAC

Expanded into Singapore and the Philippines.

Video Advertising

On June 15, 2016, we held a roundtable event in NYC for discussion on video ad spending in the upcoming election cycle. The industry event was overflowing with insights of top executives from companies such as Spotx, AOL, Vox, The Trade Desk,

NY Daily News and others. The roundtable was moderated by Philip Rosenstein, a leading writer and editor covering politics at MediaPost.

- Product Portfolio

In expanding our product portfolio, we introduced:

- Header Bidding: The new header bidding solution helps publishers optimize their entire inventory by enabling all their demand partners to bid based on the real market value of each single impression.
- In-View: It is a highly viewable out-stream video format which generates additional video inventory on a website, allowing publishers to monetize non-video content with video ads. The In-View player expands and begins to play only when the player is more than 50% in view, giving users a non-intrusive viewing experience.

Technology

- Announced new integrations with GeoEdge and Forensiq to enhance viewability measurement and improve fraud detection capabilities for clients.
- Working with Forensiq, a fraud detection company, we will channel all ad traffic through a fraud evaluation program to offer real-time detection for clients.
- GeoEdge, an ad-verification provider, has a similar role, but from a publisher perspective. It checks for malicious creatives, improving transparency between the advertiser and publisher.
